Movie Plot

COURAGE DOESN'T ASK is a movie about honor, duty and service in the military, and the courage it takes to serve, no matter who you are or what you do. The U.S. Government has refused to support COURAGE, citing the Don't Ask, Don't Tell policy against gays serving in the military. The storyline of COURAGE DOESN'T ASK begins in an Army hospital as a wounded gay soldier is fitted for an artificial leg. As he recounts how he lost his leg, he flashes back to a hail of mortar fire that will scare the hell out of the audience and set them up for a roller coaster battle sequence. Some soldiers are wounded, others killed; these scenes are emotionally exhausting. Helicopters swoop in at the last minute to save the soldiers from certain death and the battle is over as quickly as it began. This is the right movie to make and the right time to make it. COURAGE DOESN'T ASK focuses on the mission of the military and asks the question, 'If our national defense is really an issue, don't we want to engage the best and most dedicated people to defend us?' COURAGE isn't straight or gay, it just is ... courage runs toward danger, not away ... courage doesn't ask, it shouldn't have to.
